2018-19
SEASON IN REVIEW

- By George Johnson

The journey, replete with incoming head coach and a handful of new, vital on-ice recruits, began a full half-day's travel, or 10,600 kilometres as the charter aircraft flies, away.

It began amidst the towering skyscrapers and dense urban sprawl of Shenzhen, China, unofficial population 23 million.

It ended seven months later in a tough five-game, first-round post-season loss to the Colorado Avalanche.

In between however, the re-tooled, re-energized Flames certainly did dally with the heights.

The season unofficially kicked off with the announcement the team would join the Boston Bruins as part of the second O.R.G. China Games exhibition doubleheader.

"We've talked about this before but the unique thing is that in a normal camp, you've got 60-odd players," said GM Brad Treliving of the opportunity to open camp at such an exotic locale. "For us, to get the lion's share of our core group together right away gives us a competitive advantage.

"As much as it's going to be a great experience, it's not a vacation. Four practices, two games, one pre-game skate.

"That's important work.

"And it's Priority No. 1."

Although virtually half a world away, and not quite yielding the results they wanted – a 4-3 shootout loss at Shenzhen's Universiade Sports Centre and a 3-1 setback at Cadillac Arena in Beijing – the O.R.G. experience did, as Treliving had hoped, help a re-tooled group in its formative bonding process.

They visited the Great Wall, played to appreciative audiences in both cities, and soaked in a vastly different culture, all the while familiarizing themselves with each other.

"Probably the robe I bought at the Great Wall," reckoned left-winger Matthew Tkachuk at the time, when prompted for off-the-top-of-his-head memories of the once-in-a-lifetime junket, "When I put it on, the guys said I looked like Will Ferrell in Wedding Crashers.

"But I like it.

"The best part? We spend a ton of time together. That's what we were really looking forward to anyway.

"Through this trip, we've been able to really get to know the new guys, the ones just getting acclimated to the team and the city, and that's been great.

"Not everything went as planned, definitely some things were off, but you have to deal with them together.

"YOU'RE IN IT TOGETHER."

That phrase, In It Together, would morph into a mantra through a 50-win, 107-point regular campaign that wound up flirting with franchise history.

The abrupt change in direction began with the hiring of Bill Peters as head coach on April 23.

The product of Killam, Alta., had spent the previous four seasons in Raleigh, N.C., in charge of the Carolina Hurricanes.

"ONE OF THE BEST PLAYERS I'VE EVER SEEN. ONE OF THE BEST LEADERS I'VE EVER MET."

- David Rittich on Mark Giordano

"The majority of the core is still in its prime, still has room to grow," said the newly-installed Peters, surveying his group. "There's a higher ceiling we can reach.

"We'll play a game that's puck-possession, D-active. Face-offs are important, that's your first 50-50 battle. I want to have the puck. I want to possess the puck. I want to make sure we value the puck.

"Everyone wants to be the hardest-working team in the league, right? Only one out of 31 can. But you want to be in that conversation.

"Probably five or six teams, you know each and every night it's going to be a long night. It's going to be hard. Anything you get, you earn.

"We want that for sure.

"We want to have speed in our game. Whether it's puck speed, foot speed or gap speed. We want to play quick. We want to have the puck. We want to attack the puck.

"It's fun when you have the puck. It's a lot of work when you're in the D-zone and gettin' wore out. That's heavy lifting."

In rounding out the coaching staff for a new era, Geoff Ward – a Stanley Cup winner in Boston in 2011 – was added from New Jersey, and Ryan Huska promoted after a spell in charge of Calgary's top development team, the AHL Stockton Heat. They joined holdovers Martin Gelinas and Jordan Sigalet, along with video guru Jamie Pringle, in what would quickly develop into a tight-knit technical group.

Weary but optimistic returning from the China experience, the Flames launched the regular season rather inauspiciously and by Oct. 25 found themselves at a so-so 5-5 record following a 9-1 loss on home ice to Sidney Crosby and the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Gathering themselves, they'd then proceed to go on an amazing tear, rolling off a 45-20-7 record the rest of the way to collect their first 100-point season in 13 years, a first conference title since 1990, and post a 23-point improvement over the 2017-18 edition.

"Ten, 11, 12 games in we were a .500 type team," Peters acknowledged. "Meaning we had a decision to make: Were we prepared to be more efficient, to take a step or just kinda keep going down the path we were on?"

"Guys weren't happy being a .500 team so they started to dig in and sacrifice and look where we are."

Second in the overall NHL pecking order.

Over the course of the regular season, the improvements were nothing less than seismic. No team allowed fewer shots than the 2,302 surrendered by the Flames. Their 17 shorthanded goals led the league. They accumulated more home AND road points than any team across the West.

Among the most pleasing aspects of the turnaround had to be the contributions of youngsters to the good of the collective. Defenceman Rasmus Andersson laid claim to an everyday spot on the blueline and would've been joined by Juuso Valimaki had a high-ankle sprain not interrupted a solid start to the Finnish first-rounder's inaugural NHL season. Winger Andrew Mangiapane also became a regular in the lineup, while another D-man, Oliver Kylington, made 38 appearances.

The three NHL recruits brought in from Carolina – all well known to Peters – were as impactful as hoped for. Right-winger Elias Lindholm put up career numbers while providing an ideal two-way addition for the top unit of Johnny Gaudreau and Sean Monahan; Noah Hanifin complemented Travis Hamonic to form a solid second defence pair; while centre Derek Ryan fit in splendidly partnering abrasive Garnet Hathaway and Mangiapane on a momentum-shifting line.

Will-o'-the-wisp winger Gaudreau came within a point of becoming the first Flame since Theo Fleury in '92-93 to reach the 100-point plateau, finishing with a career-best 36 goals and 63 helpers, good for ninth spot on the league's scoring charts.

On March 12, he torched – no other accurate way to describe it – the New Jersey Devils for six points (3G,3A), one off Sergei Makarov's franchise record.

Monahan, meanwhile, hit for his third 30-plus goal season, finishing at a personal NHL high of 34. Among the abrasive Tkachuk's career-best 77 points was a five-spot (2G,3A) on March 15 versus the NY Rangers, arriving only five days after notching his first career hat-trick.

"AS A PLAYER, YOU MAKE YOUR NAME IN PLAYOFF HOCKEY,"

- Mike Smith

Goaltender David Rittich, working alongside veteran Mike Smith, improved on his eight-win rookie campaign, going 27-9-5-1 with a .911 save percentage and a 2.61 GAA.

Most impressively, inspirational captain Mark Giordano, evergreen at age 35, turned in the finest season of his career, topping the NHL at +39 and registering 74 points – second highest among defencemen – to be named a Norris Trophy finalist.

"I mean, nobody can say enough about him," praised Rittich, speaking of Giordano.

"One of the best players I've ever seen. One of the best leaders I've ever met.

"This guy can play in our zone, can play in their zone. He's the guy who can do . . . everything. Every single game, he's got five blocked shots.

"He's a huge, huge part of this group."

The combination of team tightness and individual flourish launched the Flames renaissance.

On March 31, with three games to spare, the Flames clinched both the Pacific Division and Western Conference via a 5-3 victory over their closest pursuers, San Jose, in the decidedly hostile environment of the Shark Tank.

Given the undeniable quality and admirable consistency of their 82-game resume, expectations heading into the post-season, both inside the dressing room and out around the city, were off-the-charts high.

"As a player, you make your name in playoff hockey," reminded Smith, savouring his first post-season action in seven years, prior to Game 1. "When you're done, it's what we all want to be known as - that big playoff guy. When the margin of error becomes so small, that's when you want to be a part it.

"There is nothing like this. You can talk all you want. Once you get in that first game and feel the energy, the intensity, the crowd, everything just . . . rises.

"Until you've lived it, you can't fully understand it. We have some guys here who've been in the playoffs and some that haven't, but for all of us this is such an exciting time."

"I've missed it. Happy to be back. I can't wait to feel it all again."

With the C of Red roaring them forward, the Flames, fortified by Smith's 25-stop shutout gem, took the opener by a 4-0 count.

The tide shifted 48 hours later, irrevocably as things played out, when the Avalanche struck at 17:21 of the third period to tie a tight game 2-2. Then, Nathan MacKinnon connected for the series-tying OT winner 8:27 into the extra frame.

A 6-2 Flames' loss in Game 3 gave the Avalanche the advantage in the series and another late lead lost during a second 3-2 OT setback left Calgary one game from elimination.

In a first round teeming with surprises, the first seed in the West and second over all found itself among the high-profile casualties, bowing 5-1 to Colorado in the fifth fixture.

"It's going to be a long summer." admitted Giordano afterwards with real regret.

"A tough one to swallow.

"It's sour right now.

"The season we had, we're not expecting to go out in five games in the first round. First in the West and the conference, obviously you come in with a lot of confidence.

"We won Game 1 and then those overtime losses – although we weren't at our best in those games – if we can squeak one of them out, we're in a different mindset.

"We couldn't, just couldn't, find a way to break through."

If there's no erasing the sting of a five-game playoff loss, there should also be no underplaying a stellar 50-win, 107-point regular season either.

In the wake of the disappointment, the prevailing feeling, to a man, was one of eagerness to get back in the same position and atone.

"I've said all season how much I trust this group," reiterated defenceman Travis Hamonic as he and his mates dispersed for the summer. "I've played many years now and on a lot of different teams but I don't think I've ever played on a team where the camaraderie and relationships are as close as we have.

"It's a group with some pretty good people inside that locker-room. You're not ready for it to end because you like coming to the rink and you like seeing the guys.

"You spend more time with these guys than with your own family. People forget that. So you really get to know each other and it's been easy in that way this year.

"Some special people here.

"Life's about learning. But you've got to want to learn.

"I think we've got a group here that does." ■

The lone trade-deadline pickup for the Flames came in tenacious defenceman Fantenberg. He collected his only point as a Flame on March 12 in a 9-4 win over New Jersey, assisting Matthew Tkachuk on the Flames' ninth tally of the night.

Fantenberg came to the NHL after a successful SHL and KHL career, signing a contract with the LA Kings in the 2017 offseason. He posted 12 points through 73 games with the Kings before being traded to the Flames.

In his first full season with the Flames, Andersson's standout play made him a mainstay in the line-up. With a potent blast from the point and solid play in his end, Andersson found himself on the Flames powerplay at points. Through the playoffs, he posted three points (1G, 2A), all coming with the extra man. Andersson scored his first NHL goal on Dec. 12 in a dramatic 6-5 win over the Philadelphia Flyers.

At 35-years-old, in his 13th season in the NHL, Giordano recorded the best season of his career. Finishing second among defenceman in league scoring, he was nominated for the Norris Trophy for the first time in his career. He finished at the top of the league in plus-minus, led all defenceman with six short-handed points, all while playing more than 24 minutes a game. Giordano put up a four-point night on Nov. 1 in a 6-5 win over the Colorado Avalanche and tallied three or more points in eight games this season.

In his ninth campaign with the Flames, the smooth-skating Brodie continued his solid offensive production from the blueline. Playing alongside Mark Giordano on the top defensive pairing for much of the season, Brodie played a responsible game on and off the puck. He garnered a three-point night in a 6-4 win over the Detroit Red Wings on Jan. 18 and scored two goals in Calgary's five-game playoff appearance against the Colorado Avalanche.

The Finnish Phenom did not wait long to make an impact in his rookie campaign. In just the sixth NHL game of his career, he notched his first goal, banking the puck off the shoulder of one of the NHL's best in Boston Bruins netminder Tuukka Rask. Valimaki was sidelined for most of the season following an injury in late November, limiting him to just 24 games with the Flames.
